

Day With the Bankers, the Merchants and the Brokers.

United States Steel Factor in Wall Street

There Was Notable Buying of This Security and It Was Unusually Strong.

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—The animation which grew up in the speculation in the stock exchange there was practically a cessation of the active business in the floor, which taxed the resources for recording transactions at times and kept the studies of the brokers at a tension throughout the day. Large crowds were trying to do business at the same time at the posts where the active stocks were dealt in. While great confusion was apparent at all times, the record of the day's results shows that the market was under intelligent direction and that the largest operations were conducted according to a plan.

The opportunity with which the heavy buying and the most important selling at other points, was evidence of the skillful leadership existing. The day's movement, to that extent, had an artificial character. But the speculative element in the market has evidently lost much of its dread of this experienced leadership in the market. It is perceived that a skilful conduct of the buying and selling, facilities the digestion of the market and the advantage of the buying, even in a healthy and normal market. The growth of the number of participants in the market, and the consequent increase in the number of participants, is not to be accepted as an index of the naturalness of the present market.

The dealings on Monday are especially noteworthy, owing to the natural tendency to open new transactions in the period of a new week, and the amount of weekly orders and letters has gone out of Wall Street from commission houses for publication, and the accumulation of orders that results from the two-day interval over Sunday.

Last week's buoyant close gave general confidence, and the selling of the new orders and the market quickly demonstrated that the hope was not disappointed. The selling of the new orders and the market quickly demonstrated that the hope was not disappointed. The selling of the new orders and the market quickly demonstrated that the hope was not disappointed.

The Day of Summer Fruits Is Over

Shipment of Young Turkeys Indicates the Approach of Thanksgiving Day.

With the close of the present week the close of the season of summer fruits and vegetables is looked for, and from that time on consumers will have to content themselves with the products of the soil which can be kept through the winter months—such as potatoes, cabbages, turnips, beets, squash, etc. The farmers who brought produce to market yesterday morning said that one more heavy frost would finish up the vegetables still in the garden, and, as freezing temperature was predicted by the weather man for last night, the close of the season may be looked for even earlier than the end of the week.

Olympia oysters are coming in in fine shape now and are rapidly disposed of by the patrons of soda fountains where the oyster cocktail is included among the offerings. Blue points are also beginning to arrive in larger quantities, though it is yet a little early for the demand to be very great.

Little retail trading came yesterday in the form of a goodly shipment of young turkeys. This was the first shipment of any size received since the opening of the season, to be over a pound wholesale is the price put on this bird, with a little advance on the quotations. Ducks come in in shipments sufficiently large to supply all demands. They range from $1.50 to $2.00 a dozen wholesale, and from $1.75 to $2.00 a dozen retail.

California grapes, a fine lot of them, were also counted among yesterday's shipments. The shipment included Tokays, and Tokays, both of which will retail at $1.75 a case.

Although there has been no advance since early last week in the prices of grain or flour, the market is decidedly stiff, with no indications of weakness. Speaking of the probability of an advance or decline in prices along this line, a dealer yesterday said: "There is but one thing that will keep grain at present figures for the next month or so, and that is the fact that farmers will be called upon to raise taxes on their farms for a few weeks, and in many instances will have to dispose of their grain to raise the needed money. After the taxes have been paid, there is likely to be an immediate advance in the grain market, as prices at present show a little stiffening. The quotations received for grain yesterday show an advance of from $2.00 to $3.00 a day over those given last week."
